M. G. EMERY AT REST

Last Tribute of Respect to His Memory Paid Today.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Frank M. Bristol, Pastor.

FLORAL OFFERINGS

The last tribute of respect and affection to the memory of Matthew G. Emery was paid this afternoon at the funeral services which were held in the Metropolitan M. E. Church, 41/2 and C streets northwest. It was regarded as fitting that his remains should be borne to this church, which is associated with so much of the life of Mr. Emery. As one of the founders of the church he was always actively identified with all its interests. In the presence of the family and relatives assembled at the residence, 207 I street, and those who had been asked to serve as pallbearers, the pastor of the church, Rev. Frank M. Bristol, D.D., offered prayer and then the casket was borne from the house.

The cortege proceeded to the church, where a large and representative number of friends and organizations had assembled. Beneath the black draped arch of the entrance the casket was conveyed, and thence to the auditorium, where the emblems of mourning showed that the shadow of death had fallen upon the church. At one side of the pulpit platform palms were massed, and about the casket were arranged the beautiful floral tributes from friends.

The services were conducted by Dr. Bristol, the pastor of the church. Rev. Dr. Naylor, the presiding elder of the Washington district of the Methodist Episcopal Church offered prayer, and the Scripture lesson was read by Rev. Dr. A. W. Pitzer, the pastor of the Central Presbyterian

Dr. Bristol's Sermon. An address of much beauty and power was delivered by Dr. Bristol. He spoke, in part, as follows:

"In the sorrows of this hour, with the 16 sense of a great loss oppressing the heart 13 and well-nigh forbidding the lips to speak 5 its tenderest sentiments of love and ven-12 eration, of regret and hope, one comes to 14 appreciate the feelings of Tennyson as he mourned the loss of his dearest friend:

"'I sometimes hold it half a sin To put in words the grief I feel, For words, like Nature, half reveal And half conceal the soul within.' "As a shock of corn gathered in in his 13 season is this good man full of years and 12 of honors gathered to his fathers. But long, faithful and beneficent as this life has been, we were not prepared with God to say: 'It is enough.' How much we demand of such a man! How we cling to 13 lfim and are loath to let him depart! Such men as Matthew G. Emery are not common and the world never seems ready to let such a man lay down his burden. "Our own burden seems heavier today and we hardly realized until now how great a share of the burden of business and home and church he was bearing all the time and was able and willing to bear. God ime and was able and willing to bear. God had richly endowed him physically and mentally, and he put to the best and most honorable use all his manly powers. He was of a virile, sturdy stock.

Revolutionary Ancestry. "He inherited the blood and spirit of a revolutionary and Pilgrim ancestry. His strong character, unswerving integrity, love of justice, common sense, patriotic 8 loyalty, innate dignity and broad-minded-13 ness seem to have partaken of the very the state of Stark and Langdon, Levi Woodbury and Lewis Cass, Franklin Pierce, John A. Dix, Horace Greeley, Jere-WANTED (Situations)......Page 12

"Our national development has been so rapid and marvelous that we can hardly realize this republic was but thirty years old when Mr. Emery was born. In 1818, the year of his birth, several of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and of the United States were still living. "The honored veterans of the revolution survived in considerable numbers. He might have seen every President of our republic excepting Washington. In his boyhood days there still walked our streets and adorned the high places such men as Jefferson, Adams, Madison, Monroe, John Marshall and Bandolp of Patracks, While Marshall and Randolph of Roanoke. While nearly the entire political careers of Calhoun, Webster, Clay and every President from Monroe were run during his lifetime. Mr. Emery was not only personally acquainted with many of these illustrious statesmen, but he knew every President from William Henry Harrison, for whom he voted. For the reception of President Pierce of his native state he prepared the White House. He was intimately acquainted with Abraham Lincoln, from whom he received his commission to raise a company for the defense of the capital at the outbreak of the civil war. "It was often my privilege to hear out late beloved and martyred President, Will-iam McKinley, speak in terms of highest esteem and brotherly affection of Mr. Emery, with whom he not infrequently con-versed on matters pertaining to the church and to the appointments and general affairs of the District of Columbia. Thus was this venerable man a witness of and par-ticipator in the marvelous and rapid de-velopment of nearly the entire nineteenth century of our political life. Compass of a Life. "It is difficult to realize what such a life has compassed. The men who have associated with the very fathers of the republic are now but few. Their presence among us is one of our greatest satisfactions. They are the nation's jewels. We rejoice to do them reverence. To lose one such is an irreparable loss. There is a sense in which all other men may be replaced. The scholar, the financier, the poet, the inventor, the artist, the statesman, the military genius may have his worthy successor, but these witnesses to the first struggles and developments of our national des-tiny have no successors. Though in the course of nature we must needs lose them only profound regret can fill every patriot heart in saying the last farewell to so venerable and honorable a citizen as Matthew G. Emery.

"Few men have been more conspicuously identified with the development of this city than was Mr. Emery. Hither he came in 1840, a young man just of age, to make his fortune. He brought with him the good old-fashloned resources of an honest, well-learned trade. He began at the foot of the ladder with no ambition to bound to the top by speculative adventures, but with a purpose to climb that ladder round by round by hard work, honest methods, pa-tient continuance in well-doing and a conscientious observance of God's laws. Here he has lived his life, wrought out his fortune. He made his good name, he de-veloped the forces and graces of his character. Here he succeeded. It is to the glory of our country that such a man succeeded, and his success should be an incentive to every young man of honor and high purpose, who would get on in the world. That life tells us again that the best capital for any young man to start his busines or professional career with is character. Period of Sixty Years. For sixty years Matthew G. Emery has come in and gone out among you. In all the relations of life as a citizen, a financier. a servant of the people in public office, a coworker in educational and philanthropic movements, a member of the Church of God, as neighbor, husband, father, man, he was true, just, honorable, above reproach. A man whom we were always proud to point to and say, 'This is an American citizen.' It was his joy and pride to have contributed his share to the improvement of this beautiful capital.

"It gave him pleasure to look back to ment, the highest monument in the world, but also laid the corner stone and foundations of the extension of the Capitol.

"Daniel Webster pronounced the oration at the initiation of that Capitol extension, Mr. Emery stood by his side proud of the greatest son of New Hampshire, that mightlest defender of the Constitution. His onlick energetic estimusation of the Union quick, energetic espousal of the Union came when the integrity of the Union was came when the integrity of the Union was assailed. His generous response to every solicitation for counsel and aid; his anticipation of the needs of the soldiers and of the government in offering and freely surrendering valuable property for their use marked him as a patriot worthy of the rich blood that was in his veins. When the citizens of Washington called him to the highest office in their gift and he became your honorable mayor it was in recognition of his genuine worth, his high minded patriotism, his public sparit and his unsullied integrity.

Education and Philanthropy. "In the educational, philanthropic and re- IMPORTANT PROGRESS ligious movements of the past half of a century and more this good man has taken a modest but conspicuous part. No good cause ever appealed to him in vain. He was the soul of courtesy, and 'he wore without abuse that grand old name of gentle-man.' Having inherited from a godly father and mother a Christian faith of the strictest orthodoxy, and loving his own Methodist Church as 'twere the apple of his eye, Mr. Emery could no more be a narrow sectarian than could that godly New England ancestor of his who was fined for harboring a Quaker. Among his friends were the good people of all churches, Protestant and Catholic, Jews and Christians.

"Now had be ever a harsh word to speak

"Nor had he ever a harsh word to speak against any man's religious convictions; but, on the contrary, was ever ready to point out the good qualities of a neighbor or citizen whom some enthusiast felt called upon to criticise. He was a broad-minded, liberal, generous man, a gentleman of the old school, a Christian indeed in whom was no guile. There is hardly a denomination of religious believers in this city, of what-ever name, that has not been the recipient of his expressions of generosity. There is hardly a benevolent institution here that has not been aided by his philanthropy. But to this church he was a tower of strength. One of its founders and charter members, president of its board of trustees, its most wealthy and liberal benefactor. its most wealthy and liberal benefactor. constant and untiring in his devotion to all its interests, blameless and gentle, cheerful and considerate, believing, hopeful and consistent, our pride, our joy, our glory, he was a strong and beautiful pillar in the temple of our God."

Interment in Rock Creek Cemetery. Musical selections were rendered by the quartet choir of the church. Upon the conclusion of the services the remains were taken to Rock Creek cemetery for inter-

The honorary pallbearers were as follows: The Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the directors of the Second National Bank, who are as follows: W. W. Burdette, William F. Mattingly, George W. Pearson, A. A. Thomas, Simon Wolf, E. E. Jackson, Chas. Schneider, Walter C. Cle-phane, William V. Cox and James S. Lam-bie; A. B. Duvall, H. D. Lynch and Justice Thomas H. Anderson, representing the Metropolitan M. E. Church; Crosby S. Noyes, Charles J. Bell, Thomas R. Jones, John Joy Edson, S. W. Woodward, E. Southard Parker, Henry A. Willard, George T. Dearing and C. F. Norment.

Tributes of Respect. A meeting of members of the council of the former municipal government of Washington was held last evening at Oppen- tive conduct of libraries. heimer's Hall, and resolutions were adopted relative to the death of Mr. Emery. Richand J. Beall called the meeting to order, and J. Beall called the meeting to order, and Joseph Williams was chosen chairman and A. P. Clark secretary. A committee consisting of Messrs. John F. Cook, H. A. Hall, A. P. Clark and R. J. Beall was appointed to draft resolutions, which were adopted. It was also decided to attend the funeral. The resolutions funeral. The resolutions, in part, set forth that "in public life he was distinguished for his good judgment and excellent abil-ity, in business for his success and sterling integrity, and in private life for his Chris-

By Church Officials. The action taken by the official board of the Metropolitan Church in regard to the loss sustained by the death of Mr. Emery has been directed to be entered upon the records of the board. His associates, after paying a tribute to his career as a public man and his high standing in the business community, speak in the following appre-ciative words of his services for the

"Methodism recognized him as her most distinguished representative in this locality, and when her hosts, from far and near, gathered in this church in 1891, on the occasion of the second ecumenical conference, . was eminently fit and proper that he should throw open his hospitable home for a public reception to these international delegates of the church of his choice.
"The Metropolitan M. E. Church acknowledges to Matthew G. Emery a debt beyond adequate expression. He was the last survivor of that heroic and devoted 'board of trustees' who, under the call of the denomination, undertook to build this church as a memorial to Methodism. Exceptional in its origin and unique in its purpose, the enter-prise would have failed except for the incessant labors and the steadfast faith of these men. Among the largest and most notable contributions to the building fund were those of Matthew G. Emery, and during those long years of doubt and struggle for existence his forceful personality as president of the board of trustees was a veritable tower of strength.

"This church will ever continue to cherish with increasing gratitude the memory of these worthy men; we will gladly tell the honorable story of their struggle and success to our children's children.

"We shall sally miss him in our church home and in our church work—the modest, Christian gentlemen. The memory of his Christian gentleman. The memory of his cheerful presence, his loving spirit, his hopeful word, his simple faith, his honest purpose, his generous open-hearted interest in all the matters of our household of faith, will ever remain with us."

Flag at Half-Mast.

As a mark of respect to the late Matthew Gault Emery, who was once mayor of Washington, the District Commissioners ordered that the flag on the District building be displayed at half-mast until after the funeral. As a preface to the order was the

"The Commissioners of the District of Columbia learn with deep sorrow of the decease at 12:10 o'clock p.m., Saturday, of Matthew Gault Emery, who was mayor of the city of Washington from June, 1870, to June, 1871. Great Saving to Similar Institutions in the Country.

Mr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, has just returned to Washington after an absence of several weeks, during which time he has attended several librarians' conventions in different sections of the country.

Mr. Putnam was seen at his office in the library by a Star reporter today, and in answer to inquiries regarding his trip, detailed a most interesting account of what he considers the most important progressive move of the library world in years, the perfection of a plan of co-operation in book cataloguing, in which the Congressional Library is to perform an important

"The trip that I have just taken," said Mr. Putnam, "was primarily to attend in behalf of the library conferences of certain state library associations. I attended one of the association of New York state, held at Laké Placid; one of the association of Ohio, held at Sandusky, and one of the association of Iowas held at Burlington I association of Iowa, held at Burlington. I attended also a meeting representing the library interests of Chicago and vicinity, and incidentally visited the University of Illinois, at Champaign, where there is the largest school for library training west of Philadelphia, and one of the largest and most efficient in the United States. There holds an annual meeting. It was this year at Waukesha, Wis. This has not proved is an association representing the library interests of the country as a whole. That is the American Library Association. That at Wattkesna, Wis. This has not proved sufficient to provide for all the necessary discussions of problems in library economy and practical projects in library work, especially co-operative work, so that associations have been formed in each of many states, and even within these in each of several of the largest cities. Their most important meetings are held in the autumn important meetings are held in the autumn. In addition to those which I attended, Indiana, for instance, is to hold its meeting toward the end of this month, Massachusetts and Rhode Island on October 31, Pennsylvania on November 13. Each such meeting brings together from sixty to over two hundred delegates engaged in the ac-

"Of course, a great deal of the discussion dealing chiefly with the general reader. At Lake Placid, for instance, and at Sandusky, there were considered practical projects for extending information to the public as to the condition, resources, methods of operation, functions and general aims of pub-lic libraries within the area of interest, There were initiated also projects for struction in library administration to librarians and assistants in smaller libraries who had entered upon active administration without previous specific training. "But at each meeting there are always some projects under consideration for co-operation among libraries as a whole in processes of cataloguing, etc., and for the promotion of greater efficiency in the effort to advance the higher research. It is these particularly that the Library of Congress owes a duty and in these it must collection of books in the western hemisphere, increasing more rapidly than any other single collection; it is organizing within its wallsbibilographic apparatus and an expert bibliographic service of high efficiency; it has an opportunity absolutely unique to render its bibliographic work of general utility. I say absolutely unique be-cause it receives without any cost to itself every book entered under the copyright law and a large mass of other material through exchange and the exchanges of the Smithsonian Institution and a very large amount of material through deliberate purchase. It has now a corps of cat-aloguers wno are experts, who are engaged in classifying and cataloguing this material and in reclassifying and cataloguing the material on hand. It has within its walls a printing office, a branch of the government printing of the govern walls a printing office, to print the product of this work. These products can be multiplied in such a way as to be available to other libraries at a cost which is only the cost of the least costly factors; for instance, in the case of catalogue cards, the additional stock and the presswork. Libratics securing the honest of the weekling the securing the honest of the weekling. ries securing the benefit of this work through these additional copies will of course, reimburse to the government the expense of producing them, but the expense will be but a small fraction of the far greater expense which they have been incurring in an attempt to do the the curring in an attempt to do the whole work individually.

"As among national libraries, the opportunity of the Library of Congress is unique in another respect, in that it is the national library of a country whose library interests are enthusiastic and active in co-operative undertakings which will increase the effi-ciency of the material they hold and eliminate wasteful duplication of effort and ex-

Sample Author Card. A Copyrighted Book. Printed Catalogue Cards. Mr. Putnam was asked to explain the nature and service of the printed catalogue cards. He did so as follows:

"Practically all American libraries today have card catalogues. In these every book appears' under its author, under the subjects of which it treats, and sometimes under its title, if the title differs from the subject. Some books have to appear in, perhaps, only two places, others in forty or fifty, where there are many authors and many subjects treated by them. On an average a book appears in from three to five different places. Now, the cards that libraries have used were in the first instance written; then they came to be typewritten, and in recent years they have in some libraries come to be printed. Printing is possible, of course, only for the larger libraries which are handling a large number of books and making elaborate catalogues—the New York public library prints, the Boston public library, the Harvard College library, the John Crerar of Chicago and even the Carnegle at Pitts-burg. perhaps, only two places, others in forty chicago and even the Carnegie at Fitts-burg.

"The Library of Congress has for some time been printing. It has now within its walls a branch plant from the government printing office.

"Now, the cost of getting any particular book into the card catalogue is far greater than the public has any notion of. There are various elements of cost; there is the work of the cataloguer, who is an expert;
